In 2005 gosch undertook the design and construction of a brand new basement below an existing house dating from 1740 in the Alton Conservation Area. The new basement comprises a family room, a study, utility room and bathroom, along with storage areas, and is the same floor area as the entire footprint of the existing house above.

Natural light is introduced via lightwells to the front and rear gardens

Approval was granted by The London Borough of Wandsworth. Gosch utilised their own team of contractors to excavate and construct the basement.

Contract value; £150,000.00
Project duration; 2005 – 2006
